ABSTRACT

This final report of a state-wide foreign language program survey made in the fall of 1971 presents statistical data based on 1,013 completed questionnaires. Results show a steady increase in foreign language enrollment in Illinois since 1969. Charts include data in these areas: (1) combined totals of foreign language enrollment in public, independent, parochial, and private schools; (2) summary of foreign language programs and teachers by languages; (3) Chicago school system enrollment by academic years 1969-1972; (4) Chicago school system enrollment by learning levels; and (5) summary of foreign language programs by counties. A list of institutions of higher education that participated in the survey is included. (RL)

With the hope of stimulating and clarifying the thinking of all administrators, educators, teachers, parents and students concerning the study of foreign languages in Illinois schools in times of change, a state-wide survey was conducted to ascertain the current status of foreign language education in Illinois. Pertinent data was accumulated and charted from the information obtained on the questionnaires returned by the school districts to the Department of Foreign Languages, Instruction and Curriculum Section, Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction. A glance at the charts reveals a steady increase in foreign language enrollment in Illinois since 1969. This phenomenon is heartening at a time when foreign language education is in a period of crisis.

The Foreign Language Educational Specialists in the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction strongly recommend that the foreign language programs be maintained and strenghtened in those schools in which a foreign language program exists. Likewise, schools without a foreign language program are encouraged to initiate one. Assistance from this office will be available to administrators and teachers wishing to establish a foreign language program in their school.

In a subsequent report, a rationale for teaching foreign languages in the international world in which we are living, in an age of rapid communications, and the pluralistic society which surrounds us, will be submitted for consideration to superintendents, principals and teachers in Illinois schools.

INTRODUCTION

Much has been said and written about the foreign language crisis throughout the United States since 1969. Most significant have been the dropping of college entrance and graduation requirements, and the declining enrollment in foreign language curricula in colleges and universities which in turn have effected adversely the high school enrollments. While this practice began in some colleges and universities as a result of individual campus problems, there has since been a veritable chain reaction in which a decline in enrollment is apparent on many campuses.

To most foreign language educators, dropping foreign language requirement for entrance or graduation was not a realistic solution to the problem. Unfortunately, in all too many cases, teachers and professors of foreign languages have engaged in a form of self-defeating thinking patterns by adjusting to the problems, rather than seeking meaningful and effective solutions to them.

While foreign language educators will agree with their colleagues about the nature and reality of the problem in individual colleges and universities brought about by limited budgets, restricted course offerings and failure to meet the needs and interests of the students, we cannot agree with the de-emphasis placed on foreign language study and the evident disregard of human values in the loss of foreign language programs.

At all levels of learning, some administrators, guidance counselors, teachers and students have been short-sighted and guilty of a simplistic view of the world which excluded the study of foreign languages in the dynamic and pluralistic society in which we live today. A generation ago, it was true, perhaps, that in mass education a practical value in the study of foreign languages was not readily apparent. At the present time, however, the study of foreign languages has taken on a compelling justification for all Americans wishing to broaden and enrich their background in cross-cultural and international understanding.

In order to have more specific information on what was happening to foreign language education in Illinois, under the auspices of the Department of Foreign Languages, Instruction and Curriculum Section, Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, a state-wide survey was conducted on the status of foreign languages. On October 15, 1971, a questionnaire was prepared and mailed to Illinois public schools and independent, parochial, and private schools. A separate survey was conducted on November 15, 1971, in all Illinois junior colleges, liberal arts colleges and universities. The questionnaires used in the survey are attached at the end of this report.

The information volunteered by these schools was charted under three major headings: Public Schools, Independent, Parochial and Private Schools, and Institutions of Higher Education in Illinois. These charts reveal the statistics accumulated from the data on the 1,013 questionnaires returned to this office representing over 90% of the 1,143 public school districts solicited in the survey. Exact percentage is not available on the independent, parochial and private schools. Data on the Chicago School System was obtained from the director of foreign languages and charted separately. This data, however, appears also in the general survey.

A summary of the projections for the next two years in junior colleges shows some junior colleges plan to introduce Polish, Russian, and German into the curriculum. Spanish and French are already being taught. Others anticipate continuous growth in foreign languages, while some hope to develop their current offerings by adding more advanced courses. One junior college reports more demand than staff and facilities can handle in the last two years. Another projects increased enrollment and interdisciplinary programs. Some anticipate no changes and hope to continue their offerings.

In the colleges, some report they will continue their offerings depending upon enrollment; others are predicting a decrease in enrollment because of budget limitations and the elimination of the foreign language requirement.

The projections in most universities appear more optimistic. One university reported that the study of Chinese will continue as part of the East Asian studies program; another anticipates an increase in Italian; others hope to expand the Russian program by adding graduate courses, Polish as a major and minor, and a doctoral program in German. Some universities anticipate no changes in enrollment, other schools report a continuing program in three languages, and at least one school has indicated a bilingual education program in Spanish. In another university, all programs are being examined according to Master Plan III; some are restating priorities with strong recommendations not to phase out any language program. Lastly, there is widespread concern over the budget crisis forced in education.

Three junior colleges reported study abroad programs in France, Germany and Spain, and one in Mexico during the semester interim. Seven colleges participate in study programs in France, Germany, Spain, Italy, Greece and Mexico. One college sponsors a junior year program at a Hebrew university.

Also, in the universities, a teacher training program is sponsored in Baden, Austria; a junior year abroad in Rouen, France, and Bonn, Germany; a program in Italian, Latin and Greek, in Rome, Italy; a travel seminar during the semester interim in Puerto Rico and Mexico; a study program in Leningrad U.S.S.R.; in Zagreb, Yugoslavia; in Barcelona and Madrid, Spain; in Vienna, Austria; in Paris and Grenoble, France; and at the Ibero-Americana University in Mexico City. Some universities cooperate with sponsoring universities to afford their students the opportunity for study in a foreign university and valuable experience in living in a foreign country.

To conclude, the charts that follow present a graphic view of the status of foreign language education in Illinois.

SUBJECT: Survey on Foreign Language Education in Illinois

The Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Title III, NDEA, is conducting a survey on foreign language education in the State of Illinois. Complete statistical data are not available at the present time on any of the items presented on the enclosed questionnaire.

In order to have an accurate profile of the Illinois foreign language programs, including the languages taught, the years or levels, the enrollment in each language, and the name(s) of the teacher or teachers in each school, it is vitally important that all information requested on the Fact Sheet for Foreign Language Survey be answered and returned to this office by October 15, 1971.

If no language program exists in some of the schools or a school district, would you kindly fill in the information at the top of the Fact Sheet for Foreign Language Survey, draw a line through the rest of the questionnaire, and write, NO PROGRAM.

Your prompt cooperation in returning this questionnaire will greatly assist this office in preparing a survey that will serve the needs of foreign language education in Illinois

SUBJECT: Fact Sheet for College and University Foreign Language Programs

The Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Title III, NDEA, is conducting a survey on foreign language education in the State of Illinois. Complete statistical data are not available at the present time on any of the items presented on the enclosed questionnaire. We should like to solicit your cooperation in making this survey truly representative of foreign language programs as they exist at the present time in Illinois colleges and universities.

The information obtained will greatly assist foreign language educators in comparing the trends and developments in Illinois with those changes in other colleges and universities throughout the United States.

More importantly, this information will be used for the improvement and coordination of foreign language education at all levels of language instruction in our own state.

In order to have an accurate profile of the foreign language programs in Illinois colleges and universities, it is vitally important that all information requested on the attached Fact Sheet for College and University Foreign Language Programs be answered and returned to this office by November 15, 1971.
